The Newcomer

BRIAN PATTEN

"There's something new in the river,"
The fish said as it swam,
"It's got no scales, no fins, no gills,
And ignores the impassable dam."

"There's something new in the trees,"
I heard a bloated thrush sing,
"It's got no beak, no claws, no feathers,
And not even the ghost of a wing."

"There's something new in the warren."
The rabbit said to the doe,
"It's got no fur, no eyes, no paws,
Yet digs deeper than we can go."

"There's something new in the whiteness,"
Said the snow-bright polar-bear,
"I saw its shadow on a glacier
But it left no foot-prints there."

Throughout the animal kingdom
The news was spreading fast –

No beak no claws no feathers,
No scales no fur no gills,
It lives in the trees and the water,
In the earth and the snow and the hills,
And it kills and it kills and it kills.

Who is this newcomer? Look at the following cartoon for an idea!
